Texas Christian University Thesis

NEXT STEPS: CREATION AND STRATEGIC CONTEMPLATION OF A WOMEN'S RHETORICS COURSE.

COMMITTEE: Charlotte Hogg (Chair), Ann George, and Carrie Leverenz

As a result of continuing and fruitful recovery and integration of women's voices into the study of rhetoric, there is a newly burgeoning exigence for scholars to undertake the next steps towards normalizing the study of women's rhetorics in the discipline. Much as new teachers of composition have need of "hands-on" material, so too do the new teachers of women's rhetorics. There is a definitive gap in the scholarship of how best to teach a women's rhetorics class, which this thesis intends to fill. Additionally, scholars have declared a need for strategic contemplation of our approaches to research, teaching, and scholarship, and this thesis works to argue in favor of that as well as to engage practically in it.

Texas Woman's University Thesis

CINDY SHEEHAN: MOTHER OF A SOLDIER, MOTHER OF A MOVEMENT.

COMMITTEE: Claire L. Sahlin (Chair) and Jillian Duquaine-Watson.

Cindy Sheehan is a peace activist who was moved to begin protesting the Iraq War after her son died fighting in Iraq in April 2004. The harsh criticism that she receives from many is due to her feminist stance and her refusal to accept the role of the "perfect mother." My thesis provides background on Sheehan, discusses the impact she had on the war in Iraq, and examines how Sheehan uses her motherhood as a basis for her activism in her writings and speeches. I further explore the treatment Sheehan received from various media outlets, discuss the positive and negative aspects of her approaches to her activism, and make suggestions concerning how she could improve her activism to help end the Iraq War as well as to help further women's rights.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

QUEENS UNIVERSITY OF CHARLOTTE

QEN 101: Rhetoric and Composition: You Say You Want a Revolution

QEN 101: Rhetoric and Composition: Good Trouble

This course challenges students to develop critical thinking, writing and research skills. Each section will emphasize the creation and revision of a variety of writing projects. Students will be challenged to improve their composition skills through directed workshops and collaborative peer-review. The title of each section may vary.

QEN 102: Rhetoric & Argument - Available Means: Understanding Persuasion in Writing as a Rhetorical Choice

QEN 102: Rhetoric & Argument - The Crossroads of Popular Culture & Identity

Part of the First-year Writing Program, this course is designed to follow QEN 101. How do advertisers convince you that their product is the best? How do politicians convince you to vote for them? All by using the ancient technique of persuasion. In this class, we will explore the ways we are persuaded particularly as it relates to quantitative (numbers) and scientific data. Yes – numbers tell a story. Scientific facts tell a story. We will consider how those stories are told, who gets to tell them, and why that matters in a world defined as “post-truth.”

QMP 100: Welcome to Queens - Roadmap

The QMP 100 Roadmap seminar introduces students to the unique educational experience provided by The Queens Advantage Program, the university’s general education curriculum. There are two key purposes of this course: 1) to introduce the kind of reflective and integrative thinking that will be expected of them in progressively challenging ways throughout the general education program and their academic careers and 2) to assist students in navigating their transition to the Queens community and its resources for their development and success.

Communication 202: Writing for Communications

This 4-credit hour course aims to foster writing confidence in students. Students will come to understand the fundamentals of excellent writing through frequent writing assignments (both in and out of class), reading, class discussion, workshops with peers, and other assignments. This course will develop students’ understanding of – and appreciation for – the writing process, rhetoric, APA style and citation rules, and the mechanics of writing well.

Communication 317: Gender and Communication

This course examines the theories and applications of gender studies in various communication contexts. Areas to be studied include: basic gender theories; roles and stereotypes; gender differences in verbal and nonverbal communication; processes and socialization; images of gender in the media; gender considerations in education; gender’s impact on friendships and romantic relationships and mixed group vs. same sex group interaction.

GASTON COLLEGE

English 011: Writing and Inquiry Support

This course is designed to support students in the development of skills necessary for success in ENG 111 by complementing, supporting, and reinforcing ENG 111 Student Learning Outcomes. Emphasis is placed on developing a growth mindset, expanding skills for use in active reading and writing processes, recognizing organizational relationships within texts from a variety of genres and formats, and employing appropriate technology when reading and composing texts. Upon completion, students should be able to apply active reading strategies to college-level texts and produce unified, well-developed writing using standard written English. This course is graded Pass/Fail.

English 111: Writing and Inquiry

This course is designed to develop the ability to produce clear writing in a variety of genres and formats using a recursive process. Emphasis includes inquiry, analysis, effective use of rhetorical strategies, thesis development, audience awareness, and revision. Upon completion, students should be able to produce unified, coherent, well-developed essays using standard written English.

This course has been identified as a Universal General Education Transfer Component (UGETC) course under the North Carolina Comprehensive Articulation Agreement. Students completing courses designated as UGETC, with a C or higher, will receive equivalent general education course credit for those courses at the receiving UNC institution.

English 112: Argument-Based Research

This course, the second in a series of two, introduces research techniques, documentation styles, and writing strategies. Emphasis is placed on analyzing information and ideas and incorporating research findings into documented writing and research projects. Upon completion, students should be able to evaluate and synthesize information from primary and secondary sources using documentation appropriate to various disciplines.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA AT CHARLOTTE

UWRT 1102: Writing and Inquiry in Academic Contexts II

Students develop an extended inquiry project that integrates materials from varied sources and includes writing in multiple genres. Students write, revise, edit and reflect on their writing with the support of the teacher and peers. Students also immerse themselves in a conversation about a topic through reading, questioning, and process writing. Polished writing might assume the forms of presentations, reviews of research, essayistic arguments, or multi-media and web-based projects. Students learn to distinguish rhetorical contexts, practice different conventions, and develop positions in relation to research. They also adopt digital technologies to network, compose, and/or critique and disseminate their work. Grades are derived primarily from portfolios that include work generated throughout the term.
